Dear Sirs:

In late November of last year, here at the University of Michigan, some members of the student group PSN (Progressive Student Network) upset the activities of your local recruiting officers. Those involved stated that they were concerned about recent events in Central America and wanted some questions answered. Indeed, operations in El Salvador, Nicaragua, and Honduras have recently been controversial topics of discussion around campus.

As members of UAC (University Activities Center), we share our organization's view that such interruptions of legitimate recruiting procedure were in poor taste, and did little to clarify the issues they were intended to call to question. Therefore, in the interest of answering these questions and dispelling any misconceptions, we would like one of your public relations officers to come and speak in either a panel discussion (the preferred option) or to present a lecture and be available for a question and answer session. We would, of course, cover any necessary expenses.

We have contacted the major campus peace groups and other organizations and have received their assurances that they will not disrupt the proceedings as long as opportunities for both sides are present (i.e. a panel discussion or a question/answer session.)

Thank you for your time and consideration. We look forward to speaking to you in the near future. Please contact us in our office at (313) 763-1107 as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Jim Speta, Eric Laumann
